SIR

re S. O. JACKSON, (MYSORE) "Soil-pan breaker"

No. dated

We beg to acknowledge your favour No. K 1797 Pat 33-23-11 dated 10/9/24 in which you refer us to your previous letter No 1c 878 Pat 33-23-9 dated 2/8/24

In your prior letter you raised an objection that the invention is not of much utility and therefore the application was rejected under Section 20 (a)

Section 20 (a) states that a person shall not be entitle to an exclusive prevelege if the invention is of no utility.

In our letter dated 7/8/24 we pointed out that the invention was of great utility and is in fact most important. We reported we had applied for patents in many countries for this invention. We further sent a printed copy of the corresponding British Indian Patent 9547 dated 31/7/23 which was accepted on 21/4/24 and has now been sealed

We anticipated that with this information before you you would reconsider your decision.

We are rather surprised that you do not refer to the information sent but merely draw out attention again to your prior letter refusing to accept.

We

P/O (Genl.) 1,000-2-5-25, (15-6-25), - - - - - - - - (7-2-1L.)

The Secy. to Govt. of Mysore 20/9/24

We think perhaps we have not placed the facts as clearly before you as we might and we accordingly propose to place them in a stronger light.

The invention is for an instrument for breaking up the soil pan, which is a hard impervious layer which forms about 12 to 15 inches below the surface of cultivated ground. For this purpose an instrument is required sufficiently slender to be capable of being driven through the superposed 12 or 15 inches of soil to reach the soil pan layer and which can fracture this layer.

All that is needed is to fracture it so that the roots of tea bushes and the like and the rain may penetrate.

This the tool our client has devised does : in a very efficient manner does to fracture the layer it is not only necessary to pierce it but also necessary to cause the point of the tool to drag through the layer by levering on the surface provided for that purpose about the head of the tool.

To show you that the tool is regarded as a very important inprovement on other implements we would say that the inventor has received very large orders for tools from the tea gardens in Assam.

The Agriculteral Implement Co of Jamshedpur are, we believe, manufacturing thousands of these tools and it is one of their most promising products.

The fact that the Indian patent has been granted is very important.

Under Section 26 (1) of the Indian Act any invention which is of no utility may be revoked.

The fact that the Indian Patent has been granted should, we submit, carry reat weight

We

The Secy. to Govt. of Mysore 20/9/24.

We have also applied for patents for this invention in the following countries :-

British India
Great Britain
Ceylon
Straits Settlements
Federated Malay States
Japan
Java
Holland &
Germany

It has already been accepted or granted in British India Ceylon F. M. S. and Straits Settlements.

The grant is under consideration in the other countries, but in no country has the suggestion been made that the invention is of no utility.

In the face of the above facts we shall be glad if you will kindly reconsider your decision.

We have the honour to be,
sir,
Your very obedient servants.
